BEHIND THE DESIGN

KITCHEN

The kitchen at Organica radiates elegance and functionality. Zoe and Tyson envisioned a space that seamlessly fused luxury with everyday usability. Every detail, from the choice of materials to the layout, was meticulously selected to create a central hub that is not only aesthetically captivating but also perfectly caters to their growing family needs.

At the heart of the kitchen lies the Natural Quartzite Patagonia benchtop from CDK Stone, renowned for its exquisite natural patterns and durability. Complementing this centrepiece is the Dekton side benchtop, chosen for its exceptional durability and low maintenance requirements, ensuring longevity in a busy kitchen environment. Designed with an open-plan layout, the kitchen features a spacious walk-in pantry that enhances storage efficiency and accessibility. SMEG appliances, adorned with elegant brass trims, not only elevate the kitchen's visual appeal but also deliver superior performance for the foodies.

Strategically placed, the windows along the eastern wall are a key design element in the kitchen. They flood the space with natural light and ventilation, creating a bright and airy atmosphere. This design choice not only enhances the kitchen's aesthetic appeal but also minimises the need for artificial lighting and cooling, contributing to a more sustainable and energy-efficient environment. The minimal windows on the west side further enhance the kitchen's comfort by mitigating heat gain during warmer months.
