

YOUR HOME DESIGNS BEHIND THE DESIGN YHD STUDIO

The YHD Studio at Organica served as the first phase of Zoe and Tyson's visionary project. As the foundational element of their residence and workspace, the Studio not only accommodated their living needs during the main house's construction but also established a distinct architectural style that pervaded throughout the entire development.

From its inception, Zoe's clear vision and Tyson's practical insights shaped the Studio's design with minimal revisions, ensuring a seamless integration of modern architectural features. Key among these are the second-level steel cladding, the overhanging garden that blurs the lines between indoor and outdoor spaces, and the limewash plaster render with elegantly curved walls, which set the precedent for the project's aesthetic cohesion.

Inside, the Studio boasts a hand-drawn circular skylight that floods the space with natural light, complemented by raked ceilings featuring six openable Velux skylights. Sleek brass ZETR power points heighten functionality and ambience, while polished concrete floors add a touch of contemporary sophistication and durability.

The construction timeline was meticulously managed, with Stage 1 Studio completed in approximately six months, demonstrating Zoe and Tyson's commitment to timely and efficient project delivery.
